

Winning of Kitty Granger

About once a month, always on a Sunday, Maurice Danby, motored from the city to his brother's farm for a brief visit.

Young Mr. Danby held a position in a city department. His standing in social life was good, and it was known that he had a fair-sized bank account. So far as friends or relatives knew, he had never been in love, and was not likely to be. Therefore it was a shock to his sister-in-law when he arrived one Sunday and said:

"Look here, Sarah, you have got to help me out."

"What is it, Maurice?" she asked.

"I'm in love."

"You can't be?"

"But I am."

"Well, won't the girl have you?"

"I haven't asked her yet."

"Then go right off and do it."

"Listen to me, woman. I came down by the old post road this morning, instead of the usual way. About three miles above here is an old red farmhouse."

"Yes, the Granger place."

"There was a girl there."

"Yes, Kitten Granger."

"She was leaning on the gate eating an apple. I am almost sure she smiled at me."

"That's your vanity. She probably gave her whole attention to the apple."

"Perhaps she did, but I'm in love with her and I am going to marry her, and I beg of you to help me bring it about."

"And make a fool of myself and a monkey of you? As I am the last corner it's her place to call on me first, and she hasn't done it. She probably will in time, though."

"Great Scott, but this is too indefinite!"

"Well, you'll have to work out your own salvation. We go by the rules of etiquette out here in the country the same as in the city, and you don't catch me transgressing the one rule, anyway!"

Maurice went out and strolled around for a couple of hours, and when he returned his sister-in-law saw a look on his face which brought the remark: "I think you have conquered your love."

"Then there's another thing coming to you. I may prolong this call for a fortnight."

"I am going to know Kitty Granger. It may not take two days to bring it about, and it may take two weeks."

"But won't the business of the city suffer by your absence from your post?"

When pressed for his plans the young man would not give them. Monday morning he entered his auto and started away with a wave of his hand. He was bound for the post road and Farmer Granger's. When he saw the old farmer at work in a field by the roadside an idea came to him. He stopped and began negotiating for a calf that was tied in the front yard, hoping in the meantime that Kitty, who was singing blithely in the house, would come out and he would get introduced to her. But she paid no attention to him. He said he would call for the calf next day, which he did, but still no acquaintance with Kitty.

When another day came, the desperate Mr. Danby was ready—he didn't know for what. He set out without a plan, which is often the best way. If he passed the house he might be shouted to stop and buy hogs or hens, but it might be his luck also to see Miss Kitty at the gate. He had just determined to take his chances when he saw her coming toward him, driving in her pony cart.

His auto speed was reduced to a fair gait, and he held straight for Kitty's pony. She quickly checked up. She screamed. Straight ahead went Danby and then there was a smash and the pony was down and things were in a glorious tangle. There was some breakage, but no lives lost.

"What did you do it for?" asked the girl when things were somewhat straightened out.

"Do you believe I did it on purpose?"

"I surely do!"

"Well, then, it was that I might get a chance to tell you that I am in love with you!"

The wedding day may not have been set yet, but young Mr. Danby has for a long time been eating his Sunday dinner at Farmer Granger's instead of at his brother's.

WORDS.

Words About Words Are The Words Words Below.

Shakespeare used about 15,000 words, and Milton half as many.

A person of culture has a speaking vocabulary of some 5,000 words.

The average man knows about 2,500 words, of which he uses about 1,500 correctly.

Ex-President Roosevelt has a vocabulary of only 7,500 words when he is in a good humor, but when he is mad he knows 10,000.

Abraham Lincoln knew the most imperishable words.

Mark Twain commanded a large income with a small vocabulary.

Mr. Rockefeller knows the most soft words.

Poor men and their wives have the fewest words.

PARADE BEHIND CROSS

THREE THOUSAND CONVERTS SING 'ONWARD CHRISTIAN SOLDIER' AS THEY MARCH.

Canton, O., Dec. 9.—Following an illuminated cross and singing "Onward Christian Soldier," 3,000 Canton citizens, converts at the revival which closed here, at night paraded the streets through blinding snow and sleet. Red fire illuminated the line of march and bands played. The marchers represented all classes in the social scale. Men who, before the revival, made no claim to decency, walked beside others who had lived the religious life for years. The parade was led by Evangelist C. G. Jordan.

Chases Thief, Shoots Himself.

Niles, O., Dec. 9.—With the revolver with which he was chasing a burglar, David Stephenson, watchman at the plant of the Ohio Galvanizing Co., was shot. While running, Stephenson tripped and fell. His revolver was discharged and a bullet entered his left arm. The prowler escaped.

Raid Shack, Find Plunder.

Akron, O., Dec. 9.—Duty sheriffs raided a shack in Wellington Heights, east Akron, and found plunder from storehouses and barns of a half dozen farms near Tallmadge.

SHEEP DURING DROUGHT.

The Lambs Should Be Taken From the Mothers Earlier Than Usual.

When pastures are completely dried up, and most of the dried grass is eaten off close to the ground, it is much better for both ewes and lambs to be separated, says E. P. Snyder, Norwalk, Ohio. Generally there are fields on which no sheep have run during the season where the pasture is comparatively fresh, and the lambs taken from their mothers and given the run of these "pastures new" will do far better than with the milk of their dams on the old pasture.

We always make it a point to save a meadow, to be ploughed for corn the following season, for the lambs at time of weaning. This season, on account of the severe drought, the timothy hasn't started at all, but as we always see liberally with alfalfa and medium clover we have now a good growth on the meadows on which we expect the lambs to thrive much better than if allowed to follow their mothers for a month.

Weaning the lambs early under these conditions has a double advantage. The ewes, as soon as relieved of the drain from nursing pick up, and will get in fine condition in time for breeding and will go into winter quarters in such a shape as to assure cheap, successful wintering.

Between four and five months old is considered the proper age to take the lambs from the ewes, but under present drouthy conditions, if one has available pasture of fresh succulent clover on which to turn them, it is advisable to wean them even considerably younger for the good of both ewes and lambs.

Like all other farm operations, the weaning of lambs should be governed largely by conditions, but one of the conditions to which many farmers give undue weight is the signs of the zodiac. I have known men to wait for three weeks after their lambs should have been weaned for the sign to get right. I don't know just where the sign should be, but have been told that it should not be in the heart, for in that case the lambs would grieve themselves to death.

I have weaned lambs every year since the close of the Civil War. I never paid any attention to the signs of the zodiac and never yet lost a lamb from a broken heart.

BLUE-BLOODED ANGORA GOAT.

Admiral Togo Was Imported From South Africa and Won First Prize.

Admiral Togo, a four-year-old Angora goat owned by F. O. Landrom of Mantell, Tex., is a blue-blooded animal, his sire having been imported from South Africa, and was the winner of the first prize over all other goats of the United States at the St. Louis exposition. His mother, Lady Holmes, was a high-bred animal and many times a prize winner.

Admiral Togo.

The mohair which was used to make Mr. Toff's trousers was of six months' growth when it was cut last March. It yielded ten pounds. In fact, the Texas people claim that it is the largest ever taken from an Angora.

Good Temper in Stallions.

In a recent discussion on horse-breeding a Scotch breeder of carriage horses with large experience said: "During a lengthy and varied experience in the breeding of young horses, one thing has been most forcibly brought home to me, viz.: that there is nothing relating to horseflesh which has a stronger tendency to prove hereditary than what may be termed inherent vice. In maintaining this theory, I do not mean to say that a mare that kicks or jibs in harness will throw all her produce with a like vice; still, if they neither kick nor jib, it is in every way likely that they will display vice in some other way. Therefore, I would say to all breeders of any type of horses, do not breed from either mares or sires which have displayed inherent vice in any form. In addition to that, I am a strong advocate for all stallions that are to be used for the getting of harness horses being themselves exhibited in harness after they are over three years old."

BADGER PRAISES AMERICAN NAVY

Defends Preparedness of United States Sea Fighting Force for Battle Before Committee of Solons.

Washington, Dec. 9.—Preparedness of the navy was defended at a hearing before the house naval committee by Rear Admiral Badger, who commanded the Mexican fleet in the first part of the Mexican trouble, and Rear Admiral Fletcher, who succeeded him.

"Ship for ship," said Admiral Badger, "the American navy is as good as the navy of any other nation."

Has No Apologies to Make.

Admiral Badger said he left the fleet in excellent condition and had no apologies to make for it to anybody. He contended that for adequate naval defense there should be 48 battleships with four torpedo boat destroyers to each of the first line, whereas there are now, including those building or under construction, 40 battleships and 68 torpedo destroyers.

He said that for additional purposes there should be two oil ships, or tanks, two supply ships, two ammunition ships and two hospital ships in the Atlantic fleet, one of each to be in active service and the other in reserve. He added that in war time many privately owned ships would have to be taken in and improvised, but those were unnecessary while the country was on a peace basis.

Admiral Badger told the committee the Atlantic fleet had kept up target practice regularly, though one or two ships may have missed a practice or two because when busy at Vera Cruz or undergoing repairs in yards.

Wilson Favors Investigation.

President Wilson told callers Tuesday he favored the disclosure of all facts connected with the preparedness of the United States for national defense, and believed that while the subject should be discussed as fully as possible, the whole question hinged on the method of investigation. The commission plan proposed by Representative Gardner he disapproved.

The president said he had no special knowledge of the existence of any lobby for stirring up military discussion at this time, but he intimated he believed there was such an organized effort. He declared that his correspondence shows widespread opposition to any efforts to involve the United States in a militarist movement.

The president refused to say whether he believed partisanship entered into the efforts to investigate the question because he thought partisanship would not be mentioned by government officials in connection with a subject concerning foreign relations.

WATERWAYS MEN MEET

CONVENTION OF THE NATIONAL RIVERS AND HARBOR CONGRESS IN WASHINGTON.

Washington, Dec. 9.—The reduction from $25,000,000 to $20,000,000 of the rivers and harbors appropriation by last summer's session of congress was the vital topic of interest when delegates from every state in the Union gathered here today to attend the 11th annual convention of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress.

While many people upbraid the rivers and harbors appropriation bill as a "pork barrel" measure, the members of the Rivers and Harbors congress look upon that measure as about the most important one on which congress is called to act. An attack on congress for cutting the appropriation was made by Senator Russell of Louisiana, leader of the waterways movement.

PARENT FINDS DAUGHTER

MOTHER AND GIRL REUNITED AFTER SEARCH COVERING ELEVEN YEARS.

Ashtabula, O., Dec. 9.—To live with her mother, whom she has not seen in 11 years, Elizabeth Wallace, 17, adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Wilder of Jefferson, left here in company with her stepfather, William H. Speicher, for Stoyestown, Pa.

When she was five years old Elizabeth's father died and her mother, who was ill, had to put the child in a home in Alliance, O. When she regained her health the child had been adopted, but she was never able to find by whom. When she became older the girl longed for her mother and wrote hundreds of letters to all parts of the state in search of her. Her mother finally located her in Jefferson high school.

Ohio State Grange Meets.

Chillicothe, O., Dec. 9.—The Ohio State grange opened its 43d annual meeting here with 85 Ohio counties represented by 184 delegates. The grange will elect a new master because Master L. C. Laylin has announced he will retire. The three candidates for the place are Renick Dunlap of Kingsport, L. J. Tabor of St. Clairsville and J. S. Brigham of Fulton county.

The Might of Example.

Example is one of the most potent of instructors, though it teaches without a tongue; it is the practical school of mankind, working by action, which is always more forcible than words. Precept may point to us the way; but it is silent, continuous example, conveyed to us by habits, and living with us in fact, that carries us along; good advice has its weight; but without the accompaniment of a good example it is of comparatively small influence, and it will be found that the common saying of "Do as I say, not as I do," is usually reversed in the actual experience of life.—Smiles.

Self-respect is a good asset, but many a man has more of it than he is entitled to.

STARTING A PARCEL-POST MARKET FOR EGGS

There are in our cities and towns many housewives who would be glad to make arrangements for receiving a supply of fresh eggs direct from the farm throughout the year. Just at this time, when eggs are scarce and the demand far exceeds the supply of newly laid eggs, there is a good opportunity for the farmer, even though he has but few eggs to market, to make contract with some city or town family to supply them with eggs. The farmer's supply at the present time will not be great enough, possibly, to satisfy the demand of the city family, but if the matter is explained it will be easy to make arrangements to market eggs by parcel post now and continue to do so throughout the year. In other words, it will be much easier to make arrangements to ship eggs now, when everybody wants them, than to do so in the spring, when they are in abundant supply and when the housewife can secure good, fresh eggs in the market anywhere at a nominal price. A satisfied winter customer can be made a profitable all-year customer if proper price adjustments are made when eggs again become plentiful. (Farmers' Bulletin 594, "Shipping Eggs by Parcel Post," can be obtained from the Division of Publications, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.)

Gasoline From Natural Gas.

The extraction of gasoline from casing-head gas (natural gas from oil wells) has become one of the important adjuncts of the natural-gas industry in the United States. The production is increasing rapidly, the quantity produced in 1913 having almost doubled that of 1912, owing to the installation of a greater number of plants and to the advance in the price of gasoline.

The uses of natural-gas gasoline are many and varied. It is principally used for raising the standard of naphtha or low-grade distillates consumed in motors; it is also used for lighting; and it can be used like regular gasoline in all the arts. There is an ever-increasing demand for this gas to be used in automobiles.

MEMORIES.

I remember, I remember, When people went on hikes On pleasant Sunday afternoons, Or rode those high-wheeled bikes.

I remember, I remember, The good old chestnut bell, Which jingled when someone Had ancient jokes to tell.

I remember, I remember, When it was a disgrace To seek divorce—'d was— Reflection on the race.

I remember, I remember, The day of small expense When gasoline was selling As low as thirteen cents.

I remember, I remember, It seems far back to me, A quarter of beefsteak Would feed a family.

I remember, I remember, The half I had not told, I cannot dodge the issue, I must be growing old.
